Candidate for Alabama Supreme Court Justice AshLeigh Dunham will visit Montgomery on Wednesday as a part of her statewide campaign tour, focusing on meeting people where they are and addressing the issues facing Alabamians.

- Dunham will be in Montgomery to advocate for IVF protections with Fight for Alabama Families. As an IVF mom, AshLeigh's story is sure to move legislators and attendees at the Alabama State House. She'll follow her work with Fight for Alabama Families with the ACLU Voting Rights Advocacy Day.

- Following her trip to the Alabama State House, Dunham will join the Alabama AFL-CIO Labor Union for their annual Road Kill BBQ event. She is committed to protecting the right to organize for working Alabama families.

Please note: AshLeigh may be available to speak to the press throughout the day on Wednesday, pending travel and availability. If you would like to speak with AshLeigh in person or via phone, please contact Mallory at 334 275 1729, or email info@AshLeighforAlabama.com.

ABOUT AHSLEIGH DUNHAM:

For more than 15 years, AshLeigh's work has centered on protecting children, families, and constitutional rights. As a juvenile court referee and special sitting circuit judge, she made decisions that immediately affected families, like where children would live, how parents would move forward, and what justice looked like in real time. As a litigator, she has spent years inside courtrooms building cases, weighing evidence, and understanding how the legal system works for the people inside it. And through her work with the bar, she has helped ensure Alabama's laws keep pace with the realities of modern families.

AshLeigh is running for Alabama Supreme Court Justice because she believes Alabamians deserve dignity and equality.
